

This is memory. It is an electrical component that stores temporary information. It is measured in megabytes. It is an essential part of the functioning of the processing information for the operating system. There are two types of memory: volatile and non-volatile.